Going Galt

My second article in American Thinker

A Political Recession

Excerpts:

> Growth is being restricted by political uncertainty more than economic policy.
>
> More business people who are either able or nearing retirement are "going Galt", downsizing or reducing their income and expenses, refusing to spend their labor to support a government antagonistic to their efforts.
> While the government is trying every economic stimulus in the play book, they are counteracting it with political initiatives that effectively destimulate economic and job growth with confiscation and uncertainty.
