No Influence Left To Peddle

from The National Review, The Clinton Global Initiative's Ignominious End by Jim Geraghty:

> Why would foreign governments suddenly lose interest in the charitable work the Clinton Foundation purported to do? They wouldn't, unless the Clinton Foundation and CGI had existed to give foreign governments and businessmen a way to curry favor with a future president from the beginning. The April shutdown, then, makes complete sense: Why keep operating if there's no influence left to peddle?
